Why this pack exists

First semester is easier when you know the sequence: documents, registration, course allocation, departmental orientation and the small habits that prevent avoidable problems. This pack is a practical checklist, not a rumour collection.

This is a student-written study companion, not a reproduced lecture handout or a leaked examination paper. Use it to organise the topics you are taught, practise the kind of thinking your course rewards, and walk into class with better questions.

What you will be able to do

- Assemble the documents and steps needed for registration.
- Plan the first two weeks to avoid deadline pressure.
- Locate the key offices and know which problems they solve.
- Build habits that protect your academic standing from day one.

How to use this pack

1. Skim the whole pack once in 20 minutes so you know what is inside.
2. Work through one section at a time with your lecture note and recommended text beside you.
3. Attempt the practice questions before reading the answers. Mark what you missed.
4. Use the final checklist to plan your revision week, one tick per study session.

> Free to download, always
> This pack is free. There is no fee, no subscription and no payment step before download, and the full PDF is not watermarked or locked. Share the link with a coursemate instead of forwarding the file.

> Confirm your official course outline
> Course codes, credit units and outlines can differ by department and session. Treat this pack as supplementary support and confirm the current outline with your lecturer, course rep or departmental handbook before an assessment.

The first two weeks

Registration delays cause stress later. Move early and keep copies of everything.

1. Confirm your admission status and collect the required documents listed by the university.
2. Complete screening and pay approved fees through official channels only.
3. Complete course registration and confirm your course list with your department.
4. Attend departmental and faculty orientation; note deadlines and contact persons.
5. Meet your course rep and level adviser, and join the official class channel.
6. Locate the library, ICT centre, health centre and your lecture venues before the first week ends.

> Official channels only
> Pay fees through the university's official platform. Anyone who offers to 'fast-track' registration for cash is a risk, not a shortcut.

Know the offices

Most first-year problems are resolved faster when you go to the right office with the right documents.

- Departmental office: course registration issues, results, lecturer contacts.
- Faculty office: academic records and faculty-level approvals.
- Bursary: fee payment confirmation and receipts.
- ICT centre: portal access and login problems.
- Health centre: medical attention and sick notes.
- Student affairs: hostel matters, welfare and student organisations.

Habits that protect your semester

Small routines prevent most avoidable academic problems.

- Attend lectures and sign attendance where required.
- Keep receipts, registration slips and screenshots in one folder.
- Submit assignments on time and keep a copy.
- Check official notice boards and portals weekly.
- Learn the course outline and assessment weightings early.
- Ask questions in class; anonymity disappears quickly at university.

The first three weeks decide a lot

Registration, course allocation, timetables, hostel allocation and identity documents all happen in a compressed period, and each has a queue. Students who finish registration early have time to attend lectures; those who leave it late spend the first month chasing signatures and miss the material that everything else builds on.

Know your documents before you need them: admission letter, result slips, birth certificate or age declaration, local government identification, passport photographs, and payment receipts. Keep both physical copies and photographs on your phone and in cloud storage. Most registration crises are a missing photocopy, not a missing qualification.

Find four places in your first week: your department's notice board, the faculty office, the library, and the health centre. These are the four you will need in an emergency, and none of them is the one you will be told about most loudly.
