Why this pack exists

This is the archive index for the department: what the 2018 course-description page listed, what the 2019 programme page listed, and a compiled 2025/2026 working map that shows what changed. It exists so you can see a code in its year instead of assuming every listing is current. Both original pages now return 404, so the sources, publication dates and retrieval dates are recorded on every entry.

This is a student-written study companion, not a reproduced lecture handout or a leaked examination paper. Use it to organise the topics you are taught, practise the kind of thinking your course rewards, and walk into class with better questions.

What you will be able to do

- Read a departmental course map with its year, level and semester intact.
- Identify which codes disappeared, appeared or were renumbered between snapshots.
- Distinguish an archived listing from a compiled working map.
- Check your own registration against the department's current, official list.

How to use this pack

1. Skim the whole pack once in 20 minutes so you know what is inside.
2. Work through one section at a time with your lecture note and recommended text beside you.
3. Attempt the practice questions before reading the answers. Mark what you missed.
4. Use the final checklist to plan your revision week, one tick per study session.

> Free to download, always
> This pack is free. There is no fee, no subscription and no payment step before download, and the full PDF is not watermarked or locked. Share the link with a coursemate instead of forwarding the file.

> Confirm your official course outline
> Course codes, credit units and outlines can differ by department and session. Treat this pack as supplementary support and confirm the current outline with your lecturer, course rep or departmental handbook before an assessment.

Why an archive instead of a single list

Course codes are not permanent. A single undated list is worse than useless, because it looks authoritative while hiding its age.

- The 2018 description and the 2019 programme page disagree in places.
- THA 113 appears in 2018 and is absent in 2019.
- THA 122, THA 153 and THA 161 appear in 2019 and are not described in 2018.
- The department now includes Film Studies in its name, which the older pages do not reflect.

- Both source pages now return 404 after the university site restructure, so the record here preserves what they said.
- Always confirm the live version with your department before registering.

> What 'current' means here
> The 2025/2026 entry is a compiled working map built from the archived sources and the department's published stress areas. It is clearly labelled and it is not an official handout.

The department's ten stress areas

Course numbering encodes the stress area, so learn the map.

- Theatre history and comparative theatre.
- Dramatic theory and criticism.
- Dramaturgy: playwriting and directing.
- Technology and design: lighting, sound, scenery, costume and make-up.
- Performance arts: acting, speech, mime, movement, puppetry.
- Media, film and broadcast arts.
- Theatre in education and applied theatre.
- Theatre administration and management.
- Theatre music and choreography.
- Popular theatre and theatre for development.

How to use this archive

Use the year bands in this pack as a checking tool.

1. Find the course code you are registering for.
2. Note the year band in which it appears.
3. If a code exists only in an older band, ask the department whether it still runs.
4. Compare credit values across bands; they change.
5. Do not cite a 2018 or 2019 listing as proof of the current curriculum.
6. Record the official answer you receive, with the date and the officer's name.

What this archive is, and what it is not

This pack collects the course outlines, module lists and programme structures for Theatre and Film Studies at the institution across several academic sessions, presented as a dated record rather than as a current syllabus. Each session is labelled, and each entry states where it came from and when it was retrieved.

The distinction matters. A 2018 outline tells you what was taught in 2018; it does not tell you what is taught now. Where the source pages were unavailable, the entry says so and records the band as a compiled working map rather than an official document. Nothing here claims to be syllabus-accurate for the current session.

Use the archive as evidence of how a curriculum changes, and as a study aid for courses that remain in the programme. Do not use it to plan registration without checking the current departmental list.

Reading an outline properly

A course outline contains more than a topic list. It states the course code and title, the credit units, the semester, the lecturer, the aims and objectives, the teaching method, the assessment weighting, the recommended texts, and often a weekly schedule. Read the assessment weighting first: it tells you where the marks are, and therefore where your effort should go.

Course codes carry information. In the Theatre and Film programme the numbering generally indicates level - 100-level foundational courses, 200-level core theory and practice, 300-level specialisation, 400-level research and production - and the ordering indicates the area within the discipline. Learning to read the numbering lets you see progression across the programme.

Compare outlines across sessions to see what was added, what was dropped and what was renamed. Renaming is often the most revealing change: a course called "Theatre Arts" in one session and "Theatre and Film Studies" in a later one is telling you something about the discipline's self-definition.

> Date every source you use
> In any archival work, a claim without a date and a provenance is not evidence. Write the session, the source and the retrieval date every time.

Using the archive for research and revision

For research, the archive supports questions about curriculum change, the shifting balance between theory and practice, the introduction of film studies into a theatre programme, and the relationship between course titles and the professional field. These are answerable from dated documents, which makes them good long-essay topics.

For revision, use only the outlines whose courses still appear in the current programme, and always in addition to the current outline. Where a topic has clearly dropped out, do not spend revision time on it; where a topic persists across sessions, it is almost certainly a core examinable area.

For a student organisation or a departmental review, the archive provides the comparison a proposal needs. An argument that a course should be reintroduced is stronger when it shows the course existed, what it covered, and when it stopped.

OUTLINE ARCHIVE

Session record

2018 - 2019 - 2025/2026

Year demarcation matters: a course code that existed in 2018 may have been renumbered, merged or dropped by 2019, and the department now also runs a film track. Read the year label before you rely on a code. The current entry below is a compiled map - take it to your course rep or the departmental office and confirm it before registration.

2018 — Archived course description — ARCHIVED

- THA 101, 111, 112, 113, 131, 132, 142, 151, 152, 162 described, with 200-level courses 202, 211, 212, 213, 214, 215, 242, 243, 244, 252
- 300-level media and design courses 333, 341, 369 plus 400-level 412 and 424
- Long essay and seminar requirements described with the departmental style manual (MLA)

What changed: The 2018 page is description-led; it does not give a complete semester-by-semester credit table for every level.

Source: unizik.edu.ng - Theatre & Film Studies course description (page dated 31 May 2018; original URL now returns 404) (retrieved 2026-10-22)

2019 — Archived programme listing — ARCHIVED

- 100 level: THA 101, 111, 131, 151, 153, 161 (first semester); THA 112, 122, 132, 142, 152, 162 (second semester)
- 200 level: THA 211, 213, 215, 231, 233, 243, 261; THA 202, 212, 214, 242, 252, 262, 264
- 300 level: THA 311, 313, 315, 331, 341, 343; THA 322, 324, 332, 342, 344; 400 level streams and THA 411, 413, 415, 417, 433, 435

What changed: The 2019 listing is a full credit table and includes THA 122, 153 and 161, which the 2018 description does not.

2025/2026 — Compiled working map — CURRENT WORKING MAP

- The department now runs as Theatre and Film Studies, with a film and broadcast track visible in THA 215, 252, 324, 333 and 344
- The ten stress areas remain the organising logic of course numbering
- Codes, credits and semester placement may have been revised under newer university curriculum standards - verify before registration

Source: Compiled by ZikShare from the archived 2018 and 2019 departmental pages plus the published stress areas; this is a working map, not an official handout (retrieved 2026-10-22)

Archive means: this records what a public departmental page listed in that year. It is not a guarantee of the current curriculum, and ZikShare is not affiliated with UNIZIK.

WORKED EXAMPLES

Do it once, slowly

These are not model answers to copy. They show the reasoning a strong student would use, step by step, so you can repeat the process on a question you have not seen.

1. Comparing two sessions

You want to show how the programme changed between two sessions.

1. List the courses in each session with codes, titles and credit units.
2. Match courses by code and then by description, not only by title.
3. Mark additions, removals and renames in separate columns.
4. Note changes in credit weighting, which indicate shifts in emphasis.
5. Identify one plausible reason for each change, and label it as inference.
6. Present as a table with a short commentary.

> What to carry forward
> Match by content as well as title. Renaming is a change worth explaining.

2. Using an archived outline for exam preparation

A course you are taking has an outline from an earlier session in the archive.

1. Confirm the course still appears in the current programme.
2. Compare the archived topic list with the current one.
3. Mark topics that appear in both - these are the core.
4. Note topics that appear only in the archive and deprioritise them.
5. Use the archived assessment weighting only as a guide, never as fact.
6. Ask your lecturer to confirm the current weighting.

> What to carry forward
> Overlap across sessions is the best available signal of what is core.

EXAM TECHNIQUE

Questions with model answers

Written in the shape your course is usually examined, with the marking logic spelled out. Attempt each one under time before you read the outline.

Q1. Why must an archived course outline be dated and attributed before it is used as evidence?

15 marks

1. An outline describes a specific session, not the programme in general.
2. Provenance determines reliability: official document versus compiled map.
3. Undated claims cannot be checked or compared.
4. Method: record session, source and retrieval date for every entry.

Q2. Explain what course codes reveal about a programme's structure.

10 marks

1. Numbering typically indicates level and progression.
2. Ordering indicates subject area.
3. Credit units indicate weighting.
4. Reading the codes reveals the programme's architecture.

REFERENCE

Glossary

Use these definitions in your own sentences; a copied definition rarely earns full marks.

Course outline. A document stating a course's aims, content, assessment and texts.

Credit unit. A measure of a course's weighting in the programme.

Provenance. The origin and history of a document.

Session. An academic year, usually named by its two calendar years.

Archive. A dated collection of documents preserved as a record.

Working map. A compiled overview assembled from available sources rather than an official document.

Assessment weighting. The proportion of marks allocated to each component.

Prerequisite. A course that must be completed before another may be taken.

Curriculum. The planned content and sequence of a programme of study.

Historiography. The study of how a record has been constructed and interpreted.

Your four-week plan

Week 1 - Survey

What is here.

- List every session in the archive.
- Note which entries are official and which are compiled.
- Record sources and retrieval dates.

Week 2 - Compare

Change.

- Build a comparison table across two sessions.
- Mark additions, removals and renames.
- Note credit changes.

Week 3 - Use

Study.

- Match archived topics to your current courses.
- Identify overlap as core material.
- Ask your lecturer to confirm weighting.

Week 4 - Research

Argument.

- Choose one curriculum change.
- Explain it with two dated sources.
- Write 500 words distinguishing evidence from inference.

Where to read more

Entry-level texts you can find in the university library or a departmental reading list. Confirm editions with your lecturer.

- Your current departmental handbook and course list.
- A guide to archival research and source criticism.
- Scholarship on curriculum change in Nigerian theatre and film education.

PRACTICE, NOT PREDICTION

Check your understanding

These questions are written for this pack to test the ideas above. They are not past examination questions and do not predict what your lecturer will set. Answer first, then compare.

1. Which course code appears in 2018 but is absent from the 2019 programme listing?

Answer: THA 113, Theatre History in Perspective: 500 BC - 1800 AD.

2. Name two codes introduced in the 2019 listing that are not described in 2018.

Answer: THA 122 Basic Performance Skills and THA 161 Participation Orientation; THA 153 Communication Models is also new in that listing.

3. Why is an undated course list a problem?

Answer: It appears current while possibly describing a superseded curriculum, leading students to register for the wrong courses.

4. What should you do if a code only appears in the 2018 band?

Answer: Confirm with the departmental office or your course rep whether it still runs before relying on it.

5. What does the current band in this archive represent?

Answer: A compiled working map built from the archived pages and published stress areas, not an official UNIZIK handout.

Your 7-step action plan

Tick each step only when you have done it. A tick you cannot defend is worse than an empty box.

- [ ] Print or save the three year bands and highlight your courses.
- [ ] List every code you plan to register for.
- [ ] Mark which band each code appears in.
- [ ] Ask the department about any code that appears only in an older band.
- [ ] Record the official answer with date and officer name.
- [ ] Share the archive with your coursemates and correct any rumour.
- [ ] Re-check after registration opens, since lists can change mid-cycle.

Keep going

One pack will not carry a semester. Pair this with your lecture notes, tutorials, and the past questions your department actually releases. If a topic still feels unclear, take a specific question to your lecturer or course rep - "I do not understand the difference between X and Y" gets a better answer than "I do not understand this course".
